

Eric Habig

Partner, Beck Rocker & Habig PC

Eric was born July 29, 1971 in Indianapolis, Indiana and is a lifelong Hoosier. He and his wife Jane have three kids, Marin, Carys and Charlie. When Eric is not working he can be found at his kids sporting events and school activities. He takes pride in working to balance the demands of a law practice with the most important things life has to offer. While Eric readily admits to not always getting the balance exactly right, his focus away from work is on family, friends and community (and an occasional ski trip out west with his college buddies).

Eric will never guarantee how a personal injury case will play out as the countless variables and uncertainties simply do not allow it – and you should run from any attorney who makes any such promises. However, he will guarantee one of the most critical things he can control during your case – communication! He will meet, speak and correspond with you directly from the beginning of the case to the end. And he will keep you regularly updated as your case proceeds. Eric will personally address any questions or concerns you may have as quickly as possible. He has learned from his clients over the years that direct and regular communication with the attorney is one of the most sought after, yet rarely provided, services needed and wanted in personal injury cases. For most, a personal injury case is their first time dealing with the legal system and the process can be complex. Eric promises to do everything in his power to keep you informed and at peace as your case unfolds.
